

Hélioparc

A shared campus

The Hélioparc technopole is located a stone's throw from UPPA's Pau campus. Since 1987, Hélioparc has been the home of three incubators, one of which focuses on geosciences, and another on digital technology, two strategic areas for E2S. Hélioparc also houses an accelerator with a national competition.

Thanks to the capacities technopole and its teams of specialists for helping entrepreneurs, more than 1200 high-potential individuals work just a very short walk from the university campus. They even share some space (entries, parking lots...), because IPREM is also located within the technopole.

By bringing together their expertise in helping start-ups and as well as their physical space, UPPA and Hélioparc want to create a common campus where researchers, entrepreneurs and students will cross paths everyday. Along with the new tools provided by E2S (accompanying entrepreneurs, leaves of absence for valorization, entrepreneurship training, contacts with CEPyA, etc.), combining the two spaces will create a new and original dynamic for business creation and for innovative projects, with continuity between teaching, research and entrepreneurship.
